In 1979, Airstream will offer nine models. From the 23-foot Safari to the 31-foot Sovereign of the Road. All of them may be ordered in the standard Land Yacht Series or the International Land Yacht Series.

The Land Yacht Series comes equipped with an automatic water system (including Univolt marine water pump and a 50-gallon polyethylene water tank). The Univolt electrical system provides power to all interior lights, fans, and 120-volt convenience outlets, when connected to an outside source.

There is also a built-in 105 ampere 12-volt battery, a battery charger with protective voltage regulator, back-up lights, two 7-gallon gas bottles and a sealed unit space heater with a circulating fan and heat ducts to distribute warmth throughout the trailer.

The Land Yacht series also has a combination gas/electric refrigerator, 6-gallon gas water heater, a modern bathroom, marinetype toilet, two 12-volt outlets, TV jacks, and polyethylene holding tanks for the toilet and wash water.

The International Land Yacht series provides still a greater degree of comfort, convenience and luxury with the following features: Solardome skylight; water filtration system with separate faucet; automatic gas regulator; entrance light; central control panel; stove exhaust fan; living area fan; digital clock; and sink covers that serve as cutting boards.

Whether you order the Land Yacht or International Land Yacht, you're getting Airstream—the finest trailer money can buy.
